Student Election
Issue

Vol. 87, No. 16

University of Nebraska at Omaha

Tuesday, October 20, 1987

—Tim McMahan

Election time

Today is the first day for Student Government elections at UNO. All last week candidates campaigned for the positions of student senator and president/regent by posting signs and shaking hands.

Grades to be posted

By TIM KALDAHL
Senior Reporter

Midterm grades will now be posted, according to a new policy adopted by the Faculty Senate at its Oct. 14 meeting.

In the past, midterm grades were mailed out to freshmen and students who were receiving a grade lower than average. Last semester because of a lack of funds, midterms had to be picked up and less than 600 students received their grades, said Kermit Peters, Faculty Senate president.

"I'm not very happy about that," Peters said. He also said he was not pleased that the funds were not available this year. "I'm appalled that they removed the funding," he said.

The last four digits of a student's social security number and grade should be posted in or outside of the classroom, Peters said. The privacy of students would be protected by using the last four digits of their social security number, he said.

"I'll be the first to admit that there are about a dozen better systems," he said, "but this was the best I could come up with in three days."

Professors can also hand out midterm grades individually, Peters said.

In addition, Peters reported that there have been no complaints, so far, about the faculty level of the garage being opened up to students.

"I have heard no complaints since this went into effect," he said. "It seems like a fair way to handle the parking situation."

The senate also unanimously approved the nomination of 17 representatives from UNO's colleges and Library to serve on the Chancellor's Review Commission.

Of those nominated, three will be selected to serve on the commission which reviews the performance of the Chancellor, said Vice President Eric Manley. The commission meets

Three candidates vie for president/regent office

Chad Brown

By JOHN ROOD
Senior Reporter

If elected, Garden Party student president/regent candidate, Chad Brown said he doesn't plan to alienate opponents Greg Gunderson and Joe Kerrigan.

"They'd both have jobs, if they wanted them," Brown said. "I think they are probably better than I am, as far as the issues are concerned," he said.

"Take faculty salaries for example. They're just too damned low. Gunderson seems to have all the answers; I'd let him handle it," he said.

Gunderson has the tools necessary to deal with the administration, Brown said. "Gunderson is the biggest windbag that ever walked the face of the earth," Brown said.

Kerrigan, who Brown described as "a nice guy" would also be offered a job. "I'd want him in charge of an organization or something. He'd like that. He sort of reminds me of a high school teacher."

Brown is hoping to be elected because he thinks he can offer something different to UNO students. "A little excitement in Student Government, maybe a little decay," he said.

Brown said that he doesn't have any past experience with Student Government at UNO. However, that shouldn't affect his relationship with the senate, he said.

"I'll probably just ignore them as much as possible," he said. "I've heard that when you go to a senate meeting, it's a joke, one big social event."

The Garden Party plans to have a lot of wine and cheese parties. We also plan to start a UNO croquet team. If they want to participate in some of the things that we do, then fine. If they don't want to, that's fine, too," Brown said.

Brown said he hopes to accomplish a lot as a non-voting member of the Board of Regents. "I think we should move the (UNL) dorms up here. We might as well bring the Husker football team, too. They would really be a good addition to the city. We'll send them the Mavericks (UNO's football team)," he said.

Brown said he has been told that, if elected, some senators might try to impeach him.

"Can they do that? It wouldn't be too bad. I think it would be a neat experience," he said.

CHAD BROWN, 20, sophomore, broadcasting.

COLLEGE: Arts and Sciences

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: The Garden Party

REASON FOR RUNNING: "Genuine concern for those people who aren't business majors but making the best of UNO, to promote and enhance the morale of the student body by being silly or tumbling a lot. Also, to be honest, I want the private parking place."

ISSUES: "The low number of participating students needs to do a 180-degree turn; the Financial Aid Office is in trouble with a capitol; T's Freedom of speech (democracy)."

QUALIFICATIONS: "Nice teeth, but then, what qualifies one for office?" I know the words to "Take the Skinheads Bowling," but I don't like the song.

Greg Gunderson

By JILL CARSTENS
Senior Reporter

UNO is losing students in three key groups, said Greg Gunderson, candidate for student president/regent.

"Recruitment and retention of these students is one of my main concerns," he said.

Gunderson said there seems to be a decline in the number of international students, minority students and the students who are shifting from full-time to part-time status at UNO. UNO has always been a nontraditional university because so many diverse cultures are brought to the campus, Gunderson said.

"I hate to see us lose this important mix and the advantages of being nontraditional," he said.

"Those students bring a valuable perspective to the university as well as income," he said.

"I'd like to see the outdated university handbooks that are supplied to international students at their home embassies replaced," he said. Some of those books are outdated by 10 years, he said.

Gunderson said he would like to set up a program that would help incoming minority and international students by having upperclassmen act as mentors.

Gunderson said another concern is reducing UNO's financial support to the Nebraska State Student Association (NSSA).

Students currently pay 50 cents per semester to remain members of the NSSA.

"Of the funds that the NSSA collects, UNO pays 70 percent," he said.

"We're subsidizing the efforts of the other member schools," Gunderson said.

Each school should pay a flat fee of $3,000, he said. The money would still come from the 50-cent fee and the remainder over the $3,000 could go to lobbying efforts.

"I also support equal credit transfers between UNO and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln," Gunderson said. The problem may not be one that can be solved in a year, but the groundwork could be laid, he said.

Protecting UNO's athletics is also of the utmost importance, Gunderson said.

GREG GUNDERSON, 21, senior, accounting and management.

COLLEGE: Business Administration

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I feel it is time for UNO to have leadership that is both qualified and concerned."

ISSUES: The protection of UNO's athletics; increased efforts in recruitment and retention; equal credit transfers between UNO and UNL.

QUALIFICATIONS: "I have served as a student senator, Executive Treasurer, Chairperson of the Student Activities Budget Commission."

Gunderson

Joe Kerrigan

By JILL CARSTENS
Senior Reporter

A president/regent should not shape policy but rather communicate and act as a "conduit" between the students and administration, president/regent candidate Joe Kerrigan said.

"Changing the university is not a realistic goal, directing the university is more important," Kerrigan said.

He is in favor of a per capita fee in funding for the Nebraska State Student Association (NSSA), he said.

Currently students pay 50 cents per student each semester to fund NSSA.

"NSSA should represent students, it shouldn't be a coalition of student governments," he said.

NSSA is particularly important to UNO because of the support it can provide, Kerrigan said.

He said that because of UNO's demographics, UNO can only influence representatives in Omaha.

"By getting with other students on other campuses, we can relay some of our concerns to other state representatives outside of Omaha," he said.

Protecting and promoting UNO's services is important, Kerrigan said.

"Attending a social event gives me more input than sitting in the Student Government office all day," Kerrigan said.

He said that UNO athletics are another of his priorities. "We don't just need to make sure that funding is not cut. We also need to promote UNO athletics," he said.

"We need to be proactive rather than reactive to budget cuts. The university also needs to do more for the athletes as people," he said.

Not only is recognition significant, but a mentoring program would also be valuable, Kerrigan said.

A faculty or administration member could act as a personal contact for that athlete," he said.

In the area of academics, Kerrigan said he believes that course evaluations for students who drop classes are necessary.

"If someone drops a class, it's for a very important reason. If it's because of the instructor then that case needs review," he said.

JOE KERRIGAN, 27, junior, industrial systems technology

COLLEGE: Engineering and Technology

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "UNO needs an individual with strength in communication and interpersonal skills, someone who is 'in touch' with the student body and has a working knowledge of the university."

ISSUES: Stronger support for higher education in Nebraska from the Legislature; enhancing UNO's image in the community through increased awareness; smooth and timely communication between students and administration.

QUALIFICATIONS: "Demonstrated proficiency as Chief Administrative Officer of Student Government and a student senator." Strong interpersonal communication skills developed through my involvement in campus activities."

Columnist: 'Veil' worth reading, but not for $21.85

I should have saved the $21.85 that I spent on Bob Woodward's "Veil: The Secret Wars of the CIA 1981-1987."

Although Woodward has improved as a writer and remains a fine reporter, his fifth book bored me to death at times.

I think anyone who has followed the news for the last six years will find much in "Veil's" old hat.

Briefly, "Veil" is the story of Pres. Ronald Reagan's obsessions: Libya, Iran and Nicaragua.

"Veil's" main character is late CIA director William J. Casey, who comes off as the perfect champion of the so-called Reagan Doctrine, and shares the president's view that anything, including assassination, must be used to check the growing Soviet Empire, or "Evil Empire," in Reagan's words.

Woodward writes, "Casey needed a shortcut around Congress. Was there some way to skirt the meet-and-confer, debate-and-leak cycle of the past? He wanted some new ideas. Was there a way to beat Congress? With its own rules?"

Casey, according to Woodward, regarded Congress as a bunch of meddlers bent on nosing into his covert operations and stopping his CIA from slowing Soviet expansionism. This adversarial relationship highlights the book.

But "Veil" drags at times, and much of the juiciest stuff — the Iran-Contra scandal — comes 300 pages into the 507-page work.

Deja vu feeling struck often, and I found myself rereading many pages that lacked punchiness or a fresh angle.

But sometimes the book stands up and chirps.

Critics have already devoted much ink to a particularly grim passage revealing Reagan's frail health in 1981 after John Hinckley Jr. shot, and nearly killed, the president.

To the world, the president had appeared robust and spirited. But Woodward writes, "He (Reagan) was pale and disoriented. Those who observed were frightened. Reagan hobbled to a seat

Peter Weber

Gateway Columnist

in the Yellow Oval Room, started to sit down and fell the rest of the way, collapsing into his chair."

And, "Reagan could concentrate for only a few minutes at a time, then he faded mentally and physically."

The book also reveals Muammar Qaddafi at his zaniest. "On a trip to Spain," Woodward writes, "The Libyan leader had worn makeup and high-heel shoes; his aides had brought a teddy bear for him."

Reagan, said Woodward, regarded Qaddafi as fat, once remarking, "Qaddafi can look in Nancy's closet anytime."

The Nancy Reagan story is one weakness of "Veil." Woodward alludes that she wields a lot of power, but never gives a specific illustrative example showing Nancy in action.

Where David Halberstam might go on and on, sometimes Bob Woodward doesn't give enough.

"Veil" suffers from a few minor editing problems, too.

The time element is often absent in "Veil," forcing the reader to wonder what years the bombings, hijackings, arms trading, etc., are taking place. Sometime between 1981 and 1987 isn't precise.

A simple thing, but causing unnecessary confusion for the reader.

The book also needs chapter headings, instead of "Veil: The Secret Wars of the CIA" printed on every page.

Also, the simple chronological progression from '81 to '87 was probably used to establish context, but it made the book read slow. Woodward could use a few lessons from John McPhee on structure.

"Veil" is worth reading; just don't fork over $21.85 for it.

'Get out and vote'

Now's your chance.

You complained about the parking situation, the rising cost of tuition, the trickling flow of financial aid, the cuts in the athletic budget, the poor recruitment and retention of target student groups, the fact that sometimes life at UNO can be one big bummer with no way out, and on and on and on.

You bitched at the long lines, the insane regulations, the stupid fees that you have to pay for no apparent reason.

You sulked and swore and begged for some way to do something about all the problems that you face everyday, in and out, at UNO.

Well, now's your chance to do something.

Today is the day for you, yes, you, to make a difference. You who sit there in the dining room or in the hallway of the CBA,

Tim McMahan

you who walks mournfully to your car on the other side of campus, you who sits aimlessly in front of the TV set in the Student Center watching General Hospital or some other program that has no real affect on your or anyone-you-know's life.

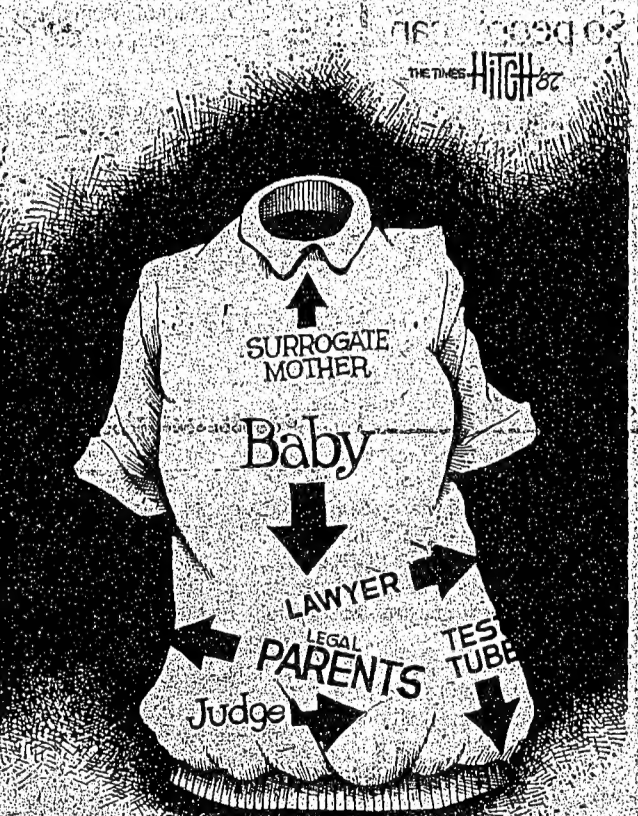

You know what I'm talking about. I'm talking about the Student Senate elections. It's the only chance, unless you are one of the few who goes to senate meetings and interacts on a daily basis with the senators, for you to do something about the state of affairs here on campus. Because your vote does mean something. When you vote you help decide how your money, yes, your money, is going to be spent.

It only takes a minute. It lasts a year. You wouldn't want someone to reach inside your pocket and spend that money for you.

But that's just what you're going to do if you don't vote. Get off your ass and do it.

'Extend activity abroad'

To the editor:

In his article "Mutant" wants UNO's dead to live," Mark Elliott made some good points. In effect, what he said was that if students do not become involved in something other than the day-to-day classroom routine, they will regret it later. Maybe Mark overheard a friend of mine recently when he wrote, "Twenty years down the road, you'll be sitting in a bar with an old buddy reminiscing about those college days, and you won't have any memories."

I'd like to offer a solution in addition to those that Mark offered: An experience as a student in another country. I guess you could say that I'm slightly biased in favor of study abroad because of my position here. However, because of my job, I am aware of some fantastic opportunities, some being scholarships, that are not being pursued by many students. I also get to hear the fun stories and see the smiles of those students who have been abroad.

The national average of university students who study abroad is about one percent. The students in this relatively small group have taken the initiative to research and apply for programs that have enabled them to study or work in another country for a summer, semester or year. They have enriched themselves by learning another language, another culture, and, most importantly, another perspective of the world. They are often more attractive to employers because of this. They have returned here and more interested in becoming involved in things at UNO and throughout Omaha.

The first step, asking questions and researching the opportunities, is an easy one requiring no commitment. Mark said he wasn't asking very much, and I agree. You owe it to yourself, really, to expand your horizons. Study abroad is an excellent way to accomplish that.

Jay Harris,

UNO International Exchange Advisor

'Charismatic communicator'

To the editor:

Qualifications mean a lot. So, Joe Kerrigan, president/regent candidate, has a resume that would put the president of Beta Alpha Sci to shame. But that's not the point.

The president/regent must be a charismatic individual who can communicate the needs of the students. Without knowing the students, one cannot purport to communicate their needs.

That is why Joe Kerrigan will be such a superb president/regent. He doesn't have to ask the students how they feel; he already knows because they have already told him. My vote is for Joe Kerrigan on Oct. 20.

'Joe is supportive'

To the editor:

Joe Kerrigan represents to me the ideal campus leader. Kerrigan owns the communication skills that allow him to interact well with people, both his fellow students and superiors. We need a student president/regent who is going to be visible to his fellow students and communicate with them continuously. We need someone who is going to talk to the students in order to understand how they feel and want to be represented instead of being only concerned with the way he feels on issues.

As former CAO, Joe Kerrigan's open-mindedness and accessibility proved to be key factors of his success in his position. Joe has always been interested and supportive of student organizations, even those he is not directly involved in. As former board member of SPO and chairperson of the Rising Star Series, I was very impressed by Joe Kerrigan's involvement and support of SPO activities, even though he wasn't a member of our organization. I feel Joe Kerrigan is clearly the best choice for student president/regent.

'UNO politics in infancy'

To the editor:

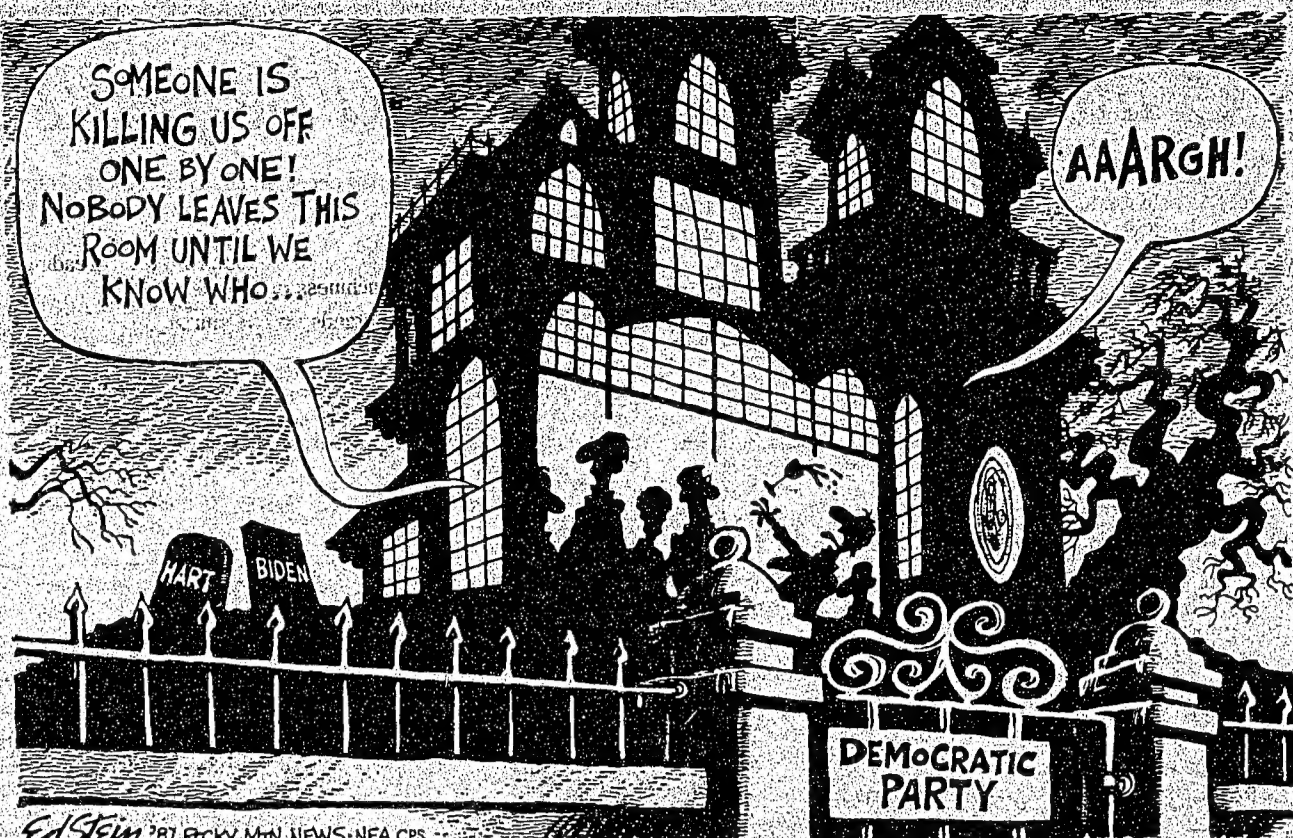

Political disputes have been predominant in American history since our early beginnings. For example, Aaron Burr shot Alexander Hamilton in a duel over political viewpoints.

Times have not changed, nor should they. Political parties are essentially adversarial, and that is the way politics work.

Campus politics at UNO are presently in the infant stage. The learning and growing stages are next. The current problem with campus politics is that our newspaper is too small to investigate allegations concerning candidates. The students have to rely on biased editorials and letters to the editor.

I personally support Joe Kerrigan for student president/regent, but I do not want to sway your vote. On Oct. 20 and 21, go meet the candidates. Find the candidate with a dynamic personality and valued experience. It is your decision, you make it. Do not let others make it for you.

Child Care Center could be paid off within a year

The Student Senate allocated $500 to the Pen and Sword Society to help fund the society's 30th anniversary celebration in November at its Thursday meeting. The money will go toward the cost of a banquet that will be held for the occasion.

Also at the meeting, the senate approved an allocation of $47.50 to the UNO Gay and Lesbian Organization. The money will provide mail advertising and activity promotions, according to Wes Perry, president of the organization.

In other action:

• Student Government Executive Treasurer Greg Gunderson said the final debt for UNO's Child Care Center is $2,300. The debt is being paid faster than expected and could be paid in full within a year, he said.

In his report, Gunderson said the university has received approximately 200 Fund A refund requests.

The number of requests has risen, but since enrollment is increasing I really see no problem," Gunderson said.

Fund A money is collected from student fees and is used to partially fund different organizations on campus including the Gateway, Student Government, the Disabled Students Organization and the Student Programming Organization.

• The senate also approved the nomination of Brian Johnson as director of the Student Programming Organization. Johnson follows past director Pat Neal who resigned his position after disenrolling from the university.

Johnson is well qualified for the position, having been chairman of SPO's Rising Star Committee, said Chief Administrative Officer Bryan Howell.

Other nominations approved were Frank Kros, Student Court; Lori Heasler, Traffic Appeals Board; Tim Kof and Ron Kyle, Election Commission; Cheryl Carter, Parking Commission; and Jané Cambell-Konnath, Publications Committee.

every four years.

The nominees are:

College of Arts and Sciences:

Elvira Garcia, professor, foreign languages; Gordon Mundell, associate professor, English; Jeff Peake, associate professor, geography/geology.

College of Business:

David Ambrose, professor, marketing; Frank Forbes, professor, law and society; Janet West, assistant professor, economics.

College of Education:

Richard Blake, professor, counseling/special education; Edsel Buchanan, associate professor, HPER; and Yvonne Tixier Vigil, assistant professor, teacher education.

College of Fine Arts:

Ken Bales, associate professor, music; Peter Hill, professor, art; and Robert Welk, assistant professor, dramatic arts.

College of Public Affairs and Community Service:

Burton Reed, associate professor, public administration; Cassia Spohn, associate professor, Goodrich Program; and Vince Webb, associate professor, criminal justice.

Library:

Carole Larson, assistant professor, reference; John Reidelbach, assistant professor, collections.

Sen. Gordon Becker asked the senate to investigate the legality of the Board of Regent bylaw that requires employees who work more than two days a month off-campus to have approval from the university.

Antislavery amendments to the constitution may make that bylaw unconstitutional, Becker said.

"The bylaws shouldn't disagree with the federal constitution," he said. The matter was referred to the University Counsel.

The Senate also approved the appointment of Virginia Bean to fill a vacancy on the University Committee on Library and Educational Resources.

All three candidates for a special parking advisory committee were also approved:

James Akers, Counseling/Special Education; Sonia Green, HPER; Stan Wileman, Math/Computer Science.

Students to decide fate of NSSA at election

In addition to the candidates, three referenda will also be placed on the ballots come election time.

It will be up to students to decide whether or not UNO will remain a member of the Nebraska State Student Association (NSSA), a Nebraska university coalition lobbying group.

UNO students pay 50 cents per semester to maintain membership in the NSSA, said Bryan Howell, chief administrative officer of the Student Senate.

On the ballot, students will get the opportunity to choose where that money should be spent if they decide to not fund NSSA.

The choices are the Student Government contingency fund, Council for Community and Legislative Relations (CCLR), capital expenditure and a Student Government escrow account.

Contingency money is set aside to be spent to support student groups.

If the money goes to capital expenditures, it would help pay the debt of the Child Care Center and provide funds for capitol improvements, Howell said.

A Student Government escrow account, should it get the money, could be used in possibly three to six months for allocation by the Student Senate, he said.

In addition to these decisions, the voters will also be asked whether they support the spending of student fee money to pay the salaries of the campus agencies' employees, Howell said.

Look who's running for S

Senior class

Marilou Ervin

BIO: 22, senior, marketing/management

COLLEGE: Business Administration

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I would like to make use of an opportunity to voice opinions and to vote on UNO activities. I also want to further develop my leadership and decision-making skills."

ISSUES: "To help UNO attain the reputation it deserves, to enhance student life on campus, to put money where it belongs."

QUALIFICATIONS: "I have been a student at UNO for four years and have worked on campus at the university bookstore for three years. Therefore, I am very familiar with the campus, students, faculty and staff. I budget my own limited income well and feel I can do the same for UNO."

Michael A. Gaebel

BIO: 32, senior, community health

COLLEGE: Education

REASON FOR RUNNING: "A very strong desire to serve my fellow student, to continue my participation with SG-UNO. I enjoy it."

ISSUES: "The cohesion of the Student Senate and its agencies, allocation of student fees, protecting the rights of the student."

QUALIFICATIONS: "Two and a half years of experience on the Student Senate and the Budget Committee, student at large on SABC, and my impartiality."

College candidates

Arts and Sciences

Gregory L. Clark

BIO: 22, senior, psychology and speech communication

REASON FOR RUNNING: "To get involved in UNO. Too many people stand by and don't bother to get involved."

ISSUES: UNO-UNL parity and reciprocity for grades and transfers, research funding for UNO, quality of education

QUALIFICATIONS: "Sincere and realistic concerns for our school as well as for the students."

Paul Hays

BIO: 25, sophomore, computer science

REASON FOR RUNNING: "To make sure that the students of UNO get a fair shake in the decisions and actions of student government."

ISSUES: Budget cuts to athletics, inability to transfer credits to UNL, and dissolution of party systems on campus

QUALIFICATIONS: Two years Student Senate experience, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee 1986-87, NSSA campus coordinator for two years, Student Activities Budget Commission 1985-86, orientation leader for two years

Erica Lee Johnson

BIO: 19, junior, math

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I enjoy being involved in the UNO system and would like to encourage others to get involved with issues and ideas that affect the student body. In the short time I've held my senate position, I've been involved in the Student Affairs Committee, worked on CCLR and joined the Market UNO group."

ISSUES: "An improved image of UNO, getting more people involved at UNO with issues concerning its well-being/promotion, quality of education"

QUALIFICATIONS: "This summer I was appointed to an Arts and Sciences senate seat. Having been involved with Student Orientation as an orientation leader and working extensively on campus, I have an excellent knowledge of the campus. In addition, I have the interest, desire and motivation to be an active member of the UNO Student Senate."

Ronald D. Krueger

BIO: 33, junior, computer science

REASON FOR RUNNING: "To fill my own vacancy. I'm the kind of person that gets involved. Student Government has issues brought up to it that affect the whole student body. I don't like to sit by and let others decide for me. I want my voice heard."

ISSUES: The parking problem, state budget cuts and how they affect this campus

QUALIFICATIONS: "I've served the past year and that gives me the experience. I'm concerned about issues that affect all of the student body. I'm a very vocal person and concerned about this campus and students. I tend to research an issue before I vote on it to see how it impacts us at UNO."

The following is a list of candidates who are running for seats in the 1987-88 Student Senate elections.

Included in this year's listings is the student's political party preference. Candidates who have a party listed consider themselves affiliated with that party. Though not formally recognized by the university as official organizations, the parties have played a role in the political scene this year and thus merit being included in the candidate's biographies.

Students with no listing of political party preference are independent.

All information listed was provided by the candidates and was subject to editing.

Class candidates

Freshman class

Joe Fogarty

BIO: 18, freshman, philosophy

COLLEGE: Arts and Sciences

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: The Garden Party

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: "I feel my unorthodox viewpoints would be a strong asset to the university."

ISSUES: "The total number of participating students is decreasing to below none. The Financial Aid office is in trouble with a capitol 'T' Freedom of speech."

QUALIFICATIONS: Pacesetter scholar, president of senior class at Omaha Central, "Genuine concern for each and every one of you."

Mark A. Jones

BIO: 18, freshman, political science

Junior class

Robert High

BIO: 20, junior, finance and real estate

COLLEGE: Business Administration

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I feel this would give me the opportunity to serve the best interests of the student body."

ISSUES: The demolition of the Storz mansion, funding of higher education by the Legislature, transfer of credits from other universities

QUALIFICATIONS: "I have a strong desire to help promote UNO, its students and the reputation of the university."

Pamela Kocina

BIO: 23, junior, marketing

COLLEGE: Business Administration

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I am interested in enhancing student-faculty relations and student involvement in available organizations."

ISSUES: "I would like to see UNO continue as a complete and unified university not slowly disintegrating before us, i.e., last year's dispute over athletic financing. I would like to see UNO students become more knowledgeable of the services UNO has to offer them."

QUALIFICATIONS: Three years experience with SPO including Chairperson of Rising Star Series, SPO Board Member. "I am concerned about UNO and our future."

Craig T. Niedbalski

BIO: 29, junior, general administration

QUALIFICATIONS: "I have previous experience as a senator with leadership abilities to represent the student body."

Student Senate this year. . .

John A. Majorek

BIO: 28, senior, political science

REASON FOR RUNNING: "To continue my work as an incumbent in representing the interests of my Arts and Sciences constituency."

ISSUES: "The weak lobbying by the Council for Community and Legislative Relations. I will assist in making CCLR a strong voice of the student body; lack of representation and appreciation for the veterans on campus; the need for continued upgrading, streamlining and equity in the financial aid programs."

QUALIFICATIONS: "As a two-term senator, I have a proven track record of performance with results. I have been successful in bringing community leaders onto the UNO campus and have worked for the student body in selling UNO in the community."

Business Administration

Scott K. Bates

BIO: 22, junior, marketing

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I would like to keep up my support and involvement in UNO Student Government to complete and finish ideas implemented in the 1986-87 session. My reelection would allow me to see how well our plans have worked and suggest ideas that may better their results."

ISSUES: "Marketing UNO to increase upcoming enrollment; student awareness of what UNO has to offer them in education; organizational involvement and social fulfillment; creating better community image through public relations and involvement."

QUALIFICATIONS: "I have spent a lot of time in many organizations. I am academically sound and feel I represent the student body well."

Bernie Burke

BIO: 25, junior, finance

REASON FOR RUNNING: "Organizational skill, efficiency and interest in educational issues."

ISSUES: Allocation of SG funds, parking, UNO's image and curriculum.

QUALIFICATIONS: Activity in local and state politics.

Cheryl Carter

BIO: 32, junior, accounting

REASON FOR RUNNING: "For the past year, I have had the privilege of representing the students of CBA on the Student Senate, and I have some projects started that I would like to see finished. I have learned a lot about how UNO operates, and I have had a lot of fun."

ISSUES: "We need to retain and recruit quality teachers for UNO. We need to keep improving the image of UNO. We need to stop the decrease of our funds and start to work on getting some increases in the future."

QUALIFICATIONS: One year as student senator and Oversight Chairperson, past president of the Pen and Sword Society. "I care about the students of UNO, and I can do the job."

Stephanie R. Erickson

BIO: 22, senior, banking and finance

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I was a senator for the junior class last year and learned a lot. I feel it took sometime to learn the purpose of the organization. Now, knowing a great deal more about SG-UNO, I feel I can be more of an asset in a second term of office."

ISSUES: "I would like to play more of a liaison role between students and senate; fees change from a hour basis as opposed to lump sum as to benefit those part-time and summer school student; parking problem."

QUALIFICATIONS: "I am very familiar with the role of the SG-UNO and the organizations supported by them. I understand how the committees work. I like to work with people and want very much to have a chance to transport student concerns to the organizations of SG-UNO."

Bob Ryan

BIO: 23, junior, business

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I would like to become more involved with university decision making."

ISSUES: "The allocation of funds evenly throughout the university. The image of the university by the surrounding communities. Quality representation of the student body."

QUALIFICATIONS: "I am open-minded with a willingness to find solutions to challenging problems at UNO. I can also present issues and positions in an objective manner with supporting ideas."

Continuing Studies

Chris C. Culver

BIO: 27, junior, history

REASON FOR RUNNING: "The need of the students to become active and participate in their university because their education doesn't solely come from academics."

ISSUES: Keeping quality instructors on campus; expanding UNO programs in specific areas; support continuing studies students and their program so it may continue as a college at UNO.

QUALIFICATIONS: "I am a mature student who is interested in education and able to make the university see and hear student needs."

Regis A. Johanns

BIO: 26, junior, criminal justice

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I feel it is important for students to take an active interest in their college and its activities. Veteran, minority and women's groups are not as well represented as they should be. I hope to be an active part of the solution on campus."

ISSUES: Getting students involved in UNO, veteran's rights, financial aid

QUALIFICATIONS: "I am a U.S. veteran and am currently in training to become a U.S. Army officer. I am active in Pen and Sword. I have an interest in student activities and support Student Government. I am also currently serving on the Traffic Appeals Board."

Guy A. Rudloff

BIO: 22, graduate, Continuing Studies

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "It develops a good, strong cardio-vascular system; increases endurance and keeps the tummy trim. I want to use my two years on the Student Senate and five years of campus involvement to make this a campus we can all be proud of."

ISSUES: "Strengthening the CCS program and making the College of Continuing Studies more involved in campus activities; increasing financial support for higher education from the Legislature; increase student involvement and make the campus a more enjoyable place to hang out."

QUALIFICATIONS: "Two years on senate; chairman of Student Affairs Committee both years; my knowledge of the campus itself and the administration process; I've met a large number of students in my time at UNO, and I feel I am quite in touch with their needs and concerns."

Education

Janet Alden

BIO: 21, junior, elementary education

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I served as a Student Senator this summer, and I enjoyed the opportunity to be involved in the issues concerning UNO."

ISSUES: "Gaining increased support for education from the Legislature; creating a greater awareness in the community of UNO's many quality events and activities; financially assisting campus organizations to help better them."

QUALIFICATIONS: "My knowledge of how Student Government works and the way decisions are made qualifies me for office. I have a personal interest in the College of Education and the campus in general."

Tim Lonergan

BIO: 25, junior, social sciences

STUDENT POLITICAL PARTY: Party in Progress

REASON FOR RUNNING: "To seek better education for the state of Nebraska and better student faculty relations. I also wanted to be a part of the decision makers of UNO."

ISSUES: "I hope to be included in: improving educational standard, helping out the everyday student to become aware of the issues, and getting longer library hours for those who wish to study all night."

QUALIFICATIONS: "Knowing a vast majority of the student body will give me the advantage of immediate feedback on issues. I will work hard to achieve the goals of my platform."

Sherlockian speaks at UNO

By LORI SAFRANEK
Staff Reporter

"We're all devoted to the master, Sherlock Holmes," David Wallace told a crowd gathered at the UNO Library Wednesday night.

Wallace is an active member of the Baker Street Irregulars, an all-male group of Sherlockians — fans of the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

Wallace's lecture, "The Game is Afoot," was sponsored by the Friends of the Library in honor of the 100th anniversary of the first Sherlock Holmes story, "A Study in Scarlet."

Wallace, an electrical engineer and a member of the Omaha Press Club, has studied Holmes for 45 years. As a member of the Baker Street Irregulars, he has written papers on various aspects of the Holmes series. The Irregulars named themselves after a group of street urchins Holmes employed to run errands.

The Irregulars were founded in 1934 by Christopher Morley in New York. While there are thousands of Baker Street Irregulars in the United States, the London group, the Sherlock Holmes Society, has fewer than 200 members, Wallace said.

Baker Street Irregular presents gift to Library; talks on Sherlock Holmes

The Omaha chapter of this organization, the Mywand Gazelles, was formed by two Nebraskans in 1964.

Wallace said his group — comprised of people from all walks of life — has "no dues, no rules, no committees and no officers." They do have a newsletter, however, called the "irregularly printed Baker Street Journal."

He explained the popularity of the Holmes stories.

"It was a time of peace in the world. As far as the reading public was concerned, all was serene... Holmes and Watson were there to trample evil, setting right the wrongs with which the world was plagued. To Sherlockians, it was the best of times," he said.

The character of Sherlock Holmes was molded after the traits and mannerisms of Doyle's former teacher, Dr. Joseph Bell, of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Wallace said Doyle developed an original aspect in storytelling.

"It was a time of peace in the world. As far as the reading public was concerned, all was serene... Holmes and Watson were there to trample evil, setting right the wrongs with which the world was plagued. To Sherlockians, it was the best of times."

—David Wallace

"Doyle conceived for the first time the idea of a series of stories around one central character," he said.

For his time, the character of Sherlock Holmes was surprisingly radical. In the stories, Holmes took cocaine, was a staunch bachelor and, when bored, shot bullet holes into the walls of his office — for the hell of it.

Holmes' popularity continues to this day, and according to Wallace, "the royalties are still coming in."

At the end of his talk, Wallace presented Robert Runyon, Library director, an annotated version of the Sherlock Holmes' stories. The presentation was made in honor of Richard Lane, former English professor at UNO. Lane died in September.

Wallace said that whenever the Baker Street Irregulars lose a member, they present that person's favorite library with the Holmes collection.

In the presentation, Wallace said, "We present this in memory of someone who exhibited the qualities of the best and wisest man, Sherlock Holmes."

Great musicians yes, but performers they aren't

Both Liz Story and Alex de Grassi are fine musicians, but they're boring performers.

Pianist Story and guitarist de Grassi, formerly signed on the Windham Hill label, played a dual concert Wednesday night. The Student Programming Organization Cultural Events Committee sponsored the event.

Story owned the first half of the program and, by comparison to de Grassi, took the spotlight for the entire evening. She played selections mainly from her most recent album, "Part of Fortune," her first release on the Novus/RCA label.

There is no denying Story's prowess as a pianist. Her formal training allows her a measure of articulation and a sensitivity of phrasing often unheard from self-taught musicians. Her compositional style, too, has focus and direction in a manner that shows she has integrated her conservatory training with her coffee-house improvisation schooling.

Story is an intelligent musician, and she plays her music with graceful, elegant passion.

I only wish she could incorporate this ease into her nonperformance personality.

In between songs, Story related anecdotes of her life.

about each composition she played. These were delightful additions to the program, and the audience truly enjoyed hearing about the town in Arizona where she lives now (with a post office, two grocery stores and 300 bars), the friend who tried to console her over the loss of a pet by telling her about bats (the only mammals remaining that can fly, with the exception of some people in Fairfax, Iowa) and her brother who wouldn't allow her to play with him and his friends (because girls couldn't reproduce the array of sound effects necessary for a full-scale war).

I might have believed Story was trying to emulate deadpan comic Steve Wright, but her countenance was one of a very nervous person. She wrung her hands in her lap and looked down at her feet when telling a story. She had the look of a small child at her first recital, similar to the SPO volunteer who, at the beginning of the concert, had to read from a small notecard: "And now let's give a big Omaha welcome to Liz Story."

What Alex de Grassi played I'll never know. He introduced only one of his compositions, but only to describe it as inspired by a toddler who was beating on everything in sight.

While de Grassi, too, played well and knew his instrument intimately, his stage presence was alienating. He was suffering from a bad cold, but it wasn't an excuse for ignoring the audience when they applauded him. No wonder people were getting up and leaving between songs.

I had the impression that de Grassi was out of his milieu in the Strauss Recital Hall. Although he told me after the concert that this was just the sort of place he'd been performing in since his tour started this past month, the stage didn't suit his personality.

De Grassi looked as though he'd have been more at home at the local bar. It might have been the blue jeans and flannel shirt he wore, but it was also his indifference to the audience.

De Grassi was on stage to play for himself. I could have stayed home and listened to a recording.

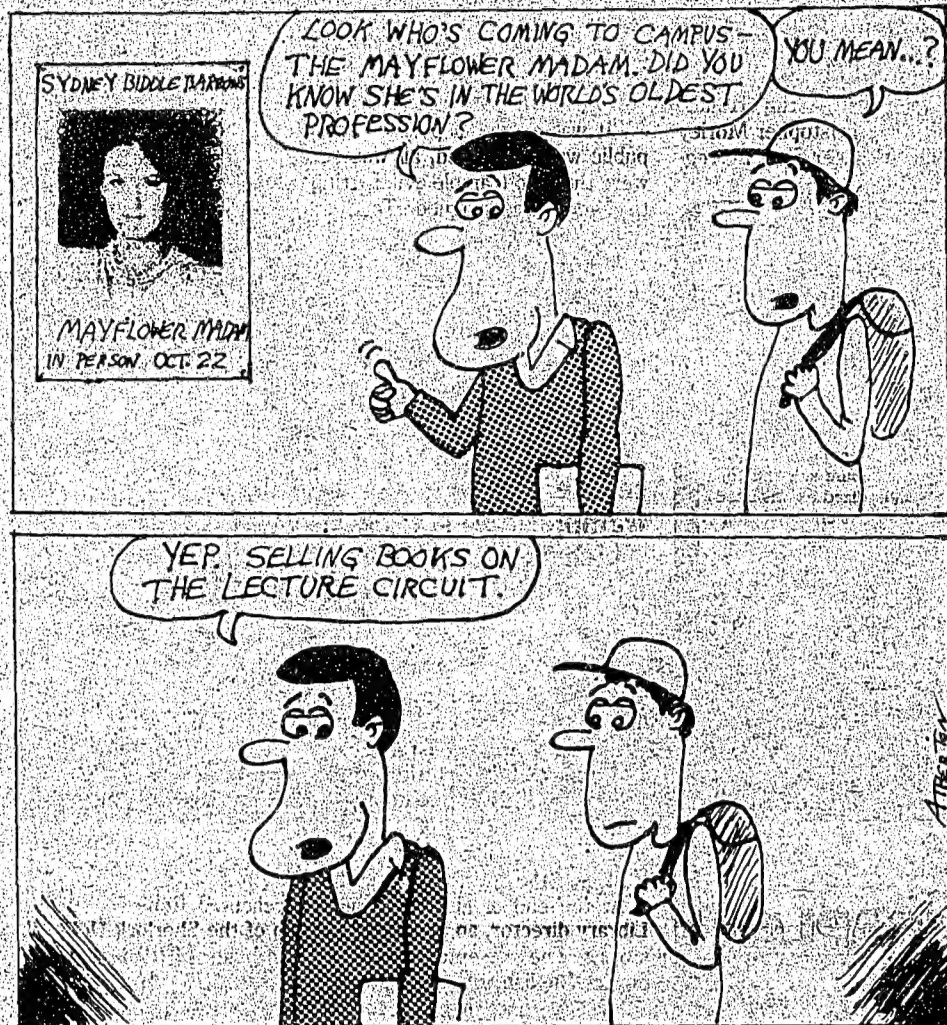

While I'm at it, SPO and the parking situation on campus get a bad review, too. This concert brought a number of people from the metropolitan area to campus. There was no indication in the advertisements that parking was reserved around the Performing Arts Center for this concert (indeed, I don't think such provisions were made out of respect to people who were attending classes), nor that the garage would accommodate visitors for 50 cents. It is only because I own a UNO parking sticker I had the privilege of parking only two blocks from the concert hall. While walking in, I was stopped several times by visitors to campus who needed to know where they could park and which building was the Performing Arts Center.

I look forward to the ground breaking for the other Performing Arts Center planned to be built by the university not only for the facilities it will provide, but also because it might mean a parking area that can be reserved for special events without curtailing the parking spaces for students in classes.

Mavs back on track after taming Vikings 28-9

By TERRY O'CONNOR
Sports Editor

Led by steady quarterback Rick Majerus, flashy halfback LaRon Henderson and the best goal-line stand of the season, the UNO football team wore down Augustana to win 28-9 Saturday at Caniglia Field.

Majerus was named the Mavs' offensive player of the week for completing 11 of 16 passes for 161 yards and one interception.

"Majerus had an excellent night," UNO offensive coordinator Bobby Thompson said. "He completed key passes for us. His reads were very good. He got off covered people and gave it to the right people."

When Majerus wasn't passing, freshman halfback Henderson was running. Henderson gained 125 yards on 10 carries and scored three touchdowns, including the season's longest TD for UNO, an 85-yard sprint that closed scoring in the fourth quarter. Henderson is the first back in Buda's 10 years as head coach to gain over 100 yards three straight games.

But for all the offensive fireworks, the Mavs relied on their defense to provide the turning point in the game that saw UNO improve to 4-3 overall, 2-3 in the North Central Conference. Augustana fell to 2-5 and 1-4.

The Mavs controlled the first half and led at the break 14-0 on fullback Jeff Podraza's 1-yard run and Henderson's first touchdown, a 5-yarder. Freshman kicker John Bonacci, who hasn't missed a conversion in 14 tries this season, added the PATs.

Augustana cut the Mavs' lead to 14-9 the first seven minutes of the second half, scoring on an 8-yard run by David San Augustin and collecting a safety when UNO punter Scott Robertson ran out of the end zone with an errant punt snap.

UNO retaliated with an 80-yard scoring drive that ended with Henderson's 3-yard TD jaunt to make the score 21-9.

Augustana, which was stopped five times by the UNO defense in Maverick territory, then drove to the UNO 3-yard line where it had a first-and-goal situation.

But the Mavs were equal to the challenge, holding the Vikings out of the end zone. Ken Maxwell, UNO's defensive player of the week, had three tackles in the stand, including a big hit on quarterback Joel Nelson that stopped the Augustana quarterback inches short of the goal on fourth down. Maxwell had seven unassisted tackles in the game, according to Buda.

The Mavs continued to fare well in the turnover department, losing one fumble and throwing one interception. For the season, the Mavs have recovered 8 of their opponents' 19 fumbles while losing just five of 15 bobbles. UNO has thrown six interceptions while picking off five.

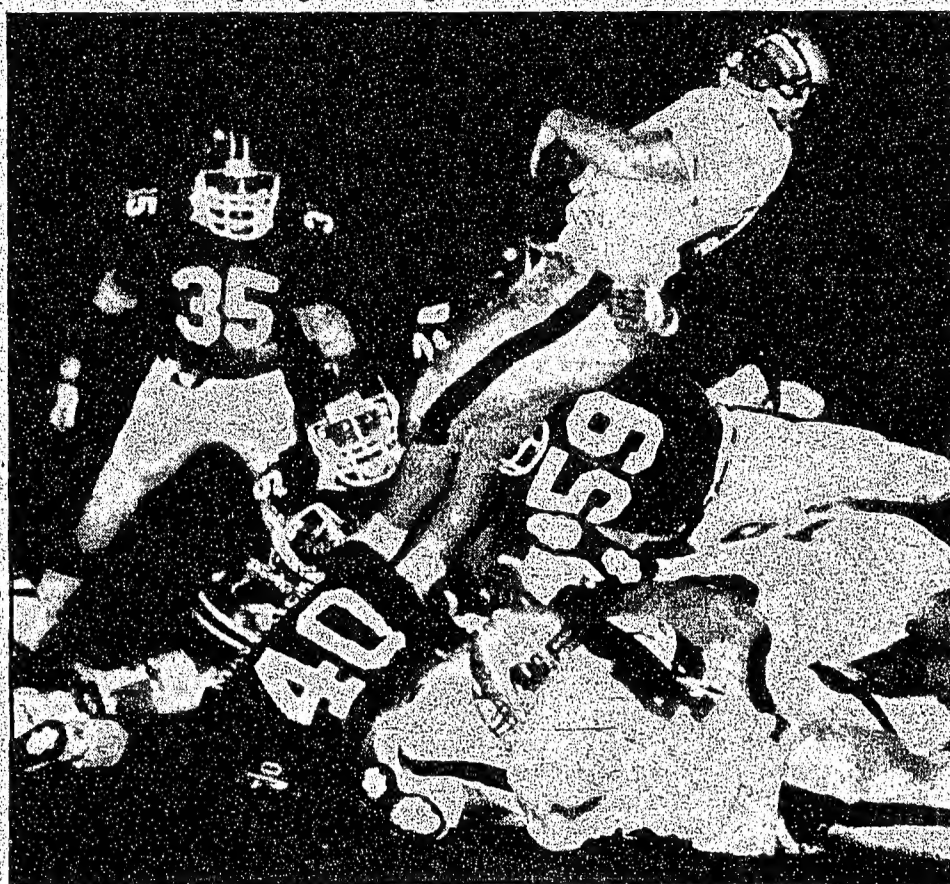

A disappointing aspect of the game for UNO was the sparse turnout of 2,300.

"I was disappointed in the crowd," Buda said. "We were coming off a good homecoming win, and we've shown a lot of improvement. I know the World Series probably took away some fans, but we deserve better support."

UNO's next game will be at Grand Forks, N.D., Saturday at 1:30 p.m. against the Fighting Sioux of North Dakota. NDU is 5-1 for the season and is tied for the NCC lead with a 4-1 conference mark.

"This is one of those crazy years," Buda said, "where there's not a bottom team in the league. Everybody is tough from the top right down."

—Akiohshi Kizaki.

Todd Culp, No. 59, Mike Zeplin, No. 40, and Shane Starks, No. 36, combine to hold an Augustana runner out of the end zone in the Mavs' best goal-line stand of the season. Mike McDonnell, No. 35, looks on.

Buda breaks out the 'bone for short-yardage punch

By RUSSELL PETERSON
Staff Reporter

UNO has a new look near the goal line that produced three touchdowns vs. Augustana and has been successful in the few times it has been used this season.

UNO Coach Sandy Buda dug through his old playbooks and has reinstalled the wishbone formation as part of the Mavs' offensive repertoire.

UNO ran the wishbone, a rushing offense popularized by the Texas Longhorns and the Oklahoma Sooners, as its primary formation in 1980. The Mavs reeled off seven straight victories that year before dropping their last three games to finish 7-3.

"It gives us an offense to be in where we dictate to the defense rather than react to them," Buda said. "We've been practicing the formation for about three weeks now, and plan to mainly use it on short yardage or goal-line situations. I'm the only one on the coaching staff that likes it but that's what we're going to run—I'm the boss."

The wishbone has three basic options. Three running backs line up in a "V" formation directly behind the quarterback, with two halfbacks and a fullback. The QB can hand off to the fullback on a dive play, keep the ball or pitch it to the trailing halfback.

Buda said the main reason he brought back the wishbone was he was tired of adjusting his short-yardage offense to the defense his opponents ran.

"We needed something that we could run each week and force the defense to change," Buda said. "The wishbone is that type of offense where you line up and the defense has to adjust to you."

The Mavs first showed the offense for one play in a 10-6 loss to then-No. 1 South Dakota. Two weeks ago, in a 21-0 win over Northern Colorado, UNO lined up in the wishbone on six plays, including all three touchdowns. The Mavs shifted into the wishbone each time it got inside the Augustana 10-yard line in a 28-9 win Saturday and scored three more touchdowns out of the formation.

Buda said he has no plans to make the wishbone UNO's primary offensive formation. However, he admitted it was an excellent way to get as many of his talented running backs into the game at one time. The Mavs shuffle Rick Gales, Chris Burns, LaRon Henderson, Steve Silva and Jeff Podraza in and out of the game at fullback and halfback.

"We'll still be a 50-50 run-pass type offense, and we'll still recruit the guy that can throw the ball first," Buda said. "But this offense gives us an opportunity, as long as we've got these good backs, to get some of them in the ballgame around the goal line and in some important situations."

Top-ranked Jennies shatter UNO tourney goal

By MARK HAGGAR
Staff Reporter

The UNO Lady Mavs, who set a goal of winning every volleyball tournament they entered this season, fell short this weekend when Central Missouri State captured their own invitational by beating the Lady Mavs.

The Jennies, currently ranked No. 1 in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II rankings, proved once again to be formidable on their home court in Warrensburg, Mo.

CMSU swept past the Lady Mavs in their second match of the tournament 15-3, 15-11, 15-7. The Jennies went on to win the tournament with four wins. UNO finished the tourney

3-1, improving its record to 17-4 overall.

"We set goals every year, and this year our goal was to win every tournament," All-American Ruth Evans said. "We set so many high goals at the start of the year, and now we're starting to realistically reevaluate them."

In the first test of those revised goals, the Lady Mavs entertain Augustana College tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the UNO Fieldhouse. The game will be a delayed broadcast on UNO's KYNE television station, channel 26, Wednesday night at 9 p.m.

"They definitely were deserving of their ranking," UNO Coach Janice Kruger said about the Jennies. "It was no surprise that we lost to them because we have been practicing like we have been playing... that's with no intensity."

Evans, who predicted UNO would upset CMSU, said the Jennies remind her of UNO's 45-4 team of a year ago.

"They are playing more together as a team," Evans said. "Our biggest problem right now is playing as a unit."

UNO freshman Brenda Baumann made her volleyball debut against CMSU. Baumann was inserted in UNO's lineup when starter Amy Gradvole wasn't able to make the trip because of a back injury. Baumann compiled 34 kills, seven aces and seven digs.

"Baumann started against Central Missouri, and they put a lot of pressure on her," Kruger said. "She handled the pressure well. We gave her Allie Nuzum-Majerus' old No. 6 because she has a good, strong arm swing and because she is an excellent passer." Nuzum-Majerus was an All-American for UNO last season.

UNO senior Lori Schutte had a strong game against the Jennies with 14 kills in the three-game match.

UNO opened the tournament with a victory over North Central Conference rival North Dakota, beating them easily 15-4, 15-1, 15-10. In the game, Evans had 10 kills, and junior Lisa Lyons had eight blocks.

Central Missouri State was the only team that proved competitive for the Lady Mavs. UNO demolished their two Saturday opponents, Minnesota-Duluth and Missouri-Kansas City. UNO beat Minnesota 15-8, 15-9, 15-9, and trounced Kansas City 15-2, 15-5, 15-0.

Former 'softie' tops bodybuilding competition

By STEVE COZAD
Staff Reporter

Carving out a muscularly-defined body and maintaining femininity is a year-round task for UNO's Tammy Latoza.

Latoza, a junior accounting major, is an amateur bodybuilder, and she has competed in three contests this year. She won her first two contests and finished second in her most recent competition.

Latoza, an Omaha Gross graduate, won the Collegian Miss Nebraska competition April 18 and less than a month later, she won the heavy weight division of the Miss Nebraska competition. Latoza qualified for national contests with her Miss Nebraska victory, according to the National Physique Committee bylaws.

The 5-foot-3, 125-pound Latoza most recently finished runner-up in the Miss Emprise contest in Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 11.

Latoza has been lifting weights for six years and bodybuilding for a year and a half. She weighed 135 pounds when she began and "looked soft," according to Dave Cuba, her training partner.

"Now, she has 14-inch arms and abdominals that look like a washboard," Cuba said.

Latoza is planning to compete in the Central States' contest to be held June 5, 1988, in Davenport, Iowa. The time away from competition will allow Latoza to work on her routine as well as handle her academic workload.

Latoza has just 8 percent body fat. She maintains her physique with a rigid training and dieting regimen.

"I train three days, take one off, and train for three more days which keeps my workouts pretty intense," Latoza said.

"Dieting is the main ingredient in accentuating the definition of the muscles, and I diet year round," Latoza said. Her diet consists of skinless turkey and chicken breasts, baked potatoes, orange roughy (an Australian fish), baby food, lots of fruits, dried lettuce, white rice and rice cakes.

"When I'm sixteen weeks out (from the next competition) my diet becomes even more bland," Latoza said. "I eat only turkey and chicken breasts and baked potatoes. I cut out all dairy products. One week out I only drink distilled water."

Latoza has mapped out her immediate and long-range goals.

"I want to win Central States and go on to compete at nationals and hopefully win because then I would be able to turn pro," Latoza said.

Tammy Latoza, the reigning Miss Nebraska bodybuilding champ, strikes a competition pose.
